LOOKING FORWARD

The results of the late election clearly show that the people generally have become thoroughly aroused to the many inadequacies that have been so plainly apparent under the present administration, both State and National. The sweeping verdict against those in control, especially in Missouri, is a scathing indictment against Hydeism, which during the past two years has blossomed forth in all its rankness and sent its stultifying odors into every nook and cranny throughout the State, blighting and suffocating all sense of fairness and freedom.

Following on the heels, as it did, of one of the clearest, fairest and most businesslike administrations that the State has ever enjoyed, makes its hideous form all the more repellant and repulsive. It is this near comparison of one of the best, with one of the worst administrations of the affairs of this State that compels the people to notice and to make comparisons. And it is such comparison that puts the desire in the hearts of the people of this State to return to such an administration as was given them just preceding the present administration.

Therefore, the people generally, throughout the State, are hoping and praying, so The Times believes, that in 1924 they will have the opportunity of voting for just such another candidate for Governor that they were privileged in having just preceding the Hyde regime. Such being true, then is it not the most natural conclusion that their hopes and desires would be best fulfilled if they could again have the opportunity to vote for the same man who gave them such a splendid and unblemished administration at that time. There appears to be no doubt but that a feeling of sincere rejoicing would ascend from the people throughout this State if they could again be given the privilege and opportunity of voting for Hon. Frederick D. Gardner to again manage the Ship of State.

In 1918 Governor Gardner went into office with practically no political knowledge, simply because he had been too busy with his private business to give politics any special attention. Yet, notwithstanding his lack of political knowledge, which had always been deemed essential in a Governor, he gathered up the governmental oars and guided the Ship of State in a manner in which it had seldom been guided. He demonstrated to the "old heads" that an economical business administration was not necessarily a dream which could never come true. Not only that, but he handled the multiplicity of business, which in the minds of many it required an experienced politician to properly negotiate, in a manner that was invariably above just criticism.

Since he performed so well before as Governor, with his absolute lack of learning along the old political lines, which had been deemed so essential to success, how much more efficient should he be if again selected for that high position. A four-year course in that position, for a man of Governor Gardner's unusual ability, would make him invaluable to the people of the entire State, if he can be persuaded to accept another term as Governor. The Times feels there is no doubt but that the people would rally to his standard in countless numbers if he will but consent to run for Governor in 1924, and again elevate him to that position by an overwhelming majority. If Governor Gardner but knew, as The Times believes it knows, the feeling and desire in the hearts of the people for him to again serve them as Governor, we cannot believe he would fail to again submit his name for that position.

The Times has received in an envelope of the Missouri State University a page illustrated write-up from the St. Louis Star of Nov. 12th. The leading headline is "Why University of Missouri Needs $4,942,247 for Next Two Years." That is going some, don't you think? But such "spirit"—or perhaps more properly speaking "nerve"—has been rapidly developing in many institutions for some time, more especially among educational institutions, until now they apparently think no more about asking for a million dollar appropriation than they did formerly for a thousand. So it needs only about $5,000,000 for the next biennial period, does it. But are the results of that institution more worthy of that sum than are the taxpayers of the State? The people could use such a sum as that very advantageously just about now. For some time past there has been a disposition on the part of the people generally to o. k. any appropriation asked for in the name of education. But now there is a developing tendency to inspect such requests a little more closely before passing such requests. What enormous needs could have thus suddenly have sprung up at the State University to cause them to NEED such an enormous appropriation? The Times fears the morale of those at the head of that institution is becoming impaired with thoughts of saddling on the taxpayers such huge sums—only for the asking. Why should the whole people be thus heavily burdened for privileges that can be enjoyed by only a comparatively few. Better slow up a little, even in educational matters.

What Is Chiropractic?

It is NOT medicine, NOT surgery, NOT osteopathy. It is a scientific method of adjusting the cause of disease, without drugs or instruments, based on a correct knowledge of anatomy, and especially the nervous system.

The Chiropractic idea is that the cause of disease is in the person afflicted, and the adjustment in correcting the wrong that is producing it.

The function of every organ in the body is controlled by mental impulses from the brain, which it transmits through the nerves. Any impingement of these nerves interfering with the transmission of mental impulses, results in an abnormal function called disease.

This interference is produced by subluxated vertebrae pressing upon nerves as they pass out from the spinal cord.

Chiropractic spinal adjustments correct the cause, and normal condition, or health, is the result.

Investigation costs nothing, and means health and happiness.

Laundry Talk

By B. T. Gentges.

Perhaps you have heard the remark that laundries are hard on clothes.

We have washed for a number of people regularly the past eight years, who never complained about clothes wearing out rapidly. Some time ago we made a test on a few pieces of unbleached sheeting, which we washed 112 times before showing any wear.
